A long debate was carried on in low tones, while George Swayne endeavoured to look as though he wore a hundred miles off, listening to nothing. But the loving accents of the girl, debating with her mother tenderly, caused Mr. Swayne--a stout and true hearted young fellow of twentyfive--to feel that there were certainly some new thoughts and sensations working in him. He considered it important to discover from her mother s manner of addressing her that tho name of the young woman was Susan. When the old lady at last consented with a wish to George s offer, he placed ten guineas on the table beside the needlework, and only stole one glance at Susan, as he bade good-bye, and took the flower-pot away, promising again earnestly that he would bring back to them the first good cutting that took root. George Swayne, then, having the lawyers almost put out of his head, carried the plant home and duly busied himself in his greenhouse, over the multiplication of his treasure. Months went by, during which tho young gardener worked hard and eat sparingly. He had left to himself but five pounds for the general maintenance of his garden; more was needed, and that he had to pinch, as far as he dared, out of his humble food and other necessities of existence. He had, however, nothing to regret. The cuttings of the flower-bells throve, and the thought of Susan was better...
